Saudis ban import of Iranian goods

DUBAI, Jan 29, (AP): Saudi Arabia was reported today to have halted imports of Iranian goods from this major Guif port in what appeared to be a boycott of the Persian state.

The report touched off speculation that the oil-rich kingdom might have started a political drive against Iran till it ends a seven-year-old war with Iraq.

The Dubai-based newspaper Khaleej Times, in a front-page report, quoted several food exporters as saying trucks carrying Iranian merchandise were being turned back from the Saudi border.

Others said they had been told by their Saudi counterparts not to send Iranian foodstuffs any more, the paper said.

The Khaleej Times said Dubai businessmen who have a major role in the trans-shipment of Iranian goods to Saudi Arabia were forewarned about the move some days ago, but were not advised as to the reasons behind it.

"We were actually expecting the embargo to go into effect from February. Our parties in Saudi Arabia had warned several days ago about this possibility, G. H. Dana of Haji Malek Zadeh Fruits and General Merchants of the Hamriya market told Khaleei Times.

Businessmen confirmed the measure saying that while Saudi Arabia had been placing a number of restrictions on imports recently, this was the first time it named a country whose produce would be banned from entry apart from products traditionally boycotted if related to Israel or South Africa.

Saud in Moscow talks on Gulf

Significant Riyadh move

MOSCOW, Jan 29, (Agencies): Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al Faisal had talks today with his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze.

Sources close to the meeting said the talks covered the situation in the Arabian Gulf region in light of the continuing war between Iran and Iraq.

Prince Saud and Shevardnadze, the sources added, also exchanged views on the current uprising of Palestinian people in occupied Arab lands.

Earlier today, Prince Saud handed a message from Saudi monarch King Fahd Bin Abdul Aziz to Soviet President Andrei Gromyko reportedly dealing with the Gulf conflict and the situation in the Middle East area.

Support

The Saudi Foreign Minister, whose country does not maintain diplomatic relations with Moscow, arrived here yesterday seeking greater Soviet support for rent international efforts to enforce UN Security Council resolution 598 ordering peace talks in the Gulf war.

The Prince is also carrying a personal message from Saudi King Fahd for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the Tass news agency said.

The Soviets in recent weeks have sharply criticised Israel's response to protests that erupted in December in the occupied territories seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

In a message to PLO leader Yasser Arafat on Jan 16, Gorbachev accused Israel of conducting a "campaign of terror and reprisals" against Arab prote-

The Soviets have also called for an end to the fighting between Iran and Iraq, and have proposed the creation of an international fleet under UN auspices to patrol the Gulf.

On arrival in Moscow, Prince Faisal said that "at present, the Arab countries are encountering serious problems, and their discussion with the Soviet side has always been important and fruitful," Tass reported.

He called on peace-loving countries to back the oppressed Palestinian people in order to regain their legitimate rights. Saud is accompanied by

The Saudi minister was last in Moscow in December 1982 as a member of a seven-man Arab League delegation. The brief meeting he had at that time with then Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was the highest level contact in Moscow between the two countries.

Moscow, which has been courting conservative Arab states to enhance its prospects of participating in any Middle East peace process, has made clear it would like to upgrade ties with Saudi Arabia.

Nusrat Bhutto to retire from politics

Exclusive by Ashraf Shad

BEGUM Nusrat Bhutto, widow of the late Pakistani Prime Minister Z.A. Bhutto, will formally announce her retirement from politics, Arab Times has learnt.

Pakistan People's Party sources in London said that after her retirement, her daughter Benazir Bhutto will become the sole leader of the party. At present they are the co-chairpersons of the PPP, the main opposition party of Pakistan.

The announcement of Begum Bhutto's retirement is expected to be made during an important central executive meeting of the People's Party starting today in Karachi. The move, observers believe is being taken to streng-then the hands of Benazir who is facing a rebellion by veteran party leaders from Punjab.

The meeting of the 31 members of the central executive is expected to be fully attended. Sources also said there will be heated discussions on important policy issues at the meeting. Begum Bhutto, currently living in France, has been away

BAHRAIN, Jan 29, (Reuter): Bahrain increased taxes yesterday on several non-essential goods and luxury items, including drink and cigarettes, including drink and cigarettes, to boost revenue in its 1988 budget.

Finance Minister Ibrahim Abdel-Karim said duty on cigarettes and tobacco would be increased by 20 per and while increased by 20 per cent, while tax on alcoholic drinks would rise to 125 per cent from 100 per cent.

Bahrain unveiled its new budget on Wednesday, setting spending at 490 million dinars ($1.3 dinars ($160 million) to be financed by domestic borrowing.

"These new measures on luxury goods will bring in something like three million dinars ($8 million) per year," the minister said in an interview with the English language newspaper Gulf Daily News.

Postal charges will also be increased from March 1, although the cost of petrol will remain unchanged. The government had also ruled out raising fees for public services such as water and power.

4 killed in Iraqi raids on ships

MANAMA, Jan 29, (Agencies): As many as four seamen were reported today to have been killed in Iraq's latest raids on Iranian oil shipping in the Gulf, raising the death toll for the month to 12. Iraq announced a new tanker raid today.

Lloyd's shipping intelligence unit, based in London, said a British captain and Filipino engineer aboard a salvage tug were among the victims, but later backtracked on this after the tug's owner in Singapore repor-tedly denied it.

The two were said by Gulfbased shipping executives to have been killed on Wednesday when an Iraqi aircrast attacked the tugboat Salverve as it tended the tanker Coral Cape, hit in another attack nine hours earlier.

Coral Cape.

Meanwhile, the official Iraqi News Agency, said Iraqi war-planes struck another "large naval target," meaning a tanker, just before dawn today. As usual, it claimed the planes scored an "accurate and effective hit" on the vessel.

Iraq has now claimed about 15 attacks since the turn of the year. of which six have been verified by Gulf-based shipping salvage executives or other sources.

The 255,688-ton Coral Cape, one of the fleet of tankers chartered by Iran to carry oil from the big Kharg Island loading terminal in the northern Gulf to other terminals farther south, was hit by one of Iraq's air-fired Exocet missiles early on Wednes-both familiar with the incident, confirmed the deaths. One of those sources said the bodies of the two men would be brought to Dubai tomorrow. According to Lloyd's, Kappa Maritime identified the two killed aboard the Coral Cape as Jang Jong Cheor and Kim Sun Hong, chief officer and pump-man, respectively. The Gulf sources identified the other two killed aboard the tugboat as Capt. Roger Hall, a Briton, and chief engineer Rosendo Borros, a French and American frigates circled an Iranian warship as it weaved around a Yugoslav cargo vessel in an unprecedented Gulf ballet display today.

With Tehran expected to exact revenge after fresh Iraqi tanker attacks, a correspondent watched from a press helicopter as the USS Gallery and the Montcalm sailed circles around the Iranian and Yugoslav ships at 1230 GMT 15 miles northwest of Dubai. An Iranian frigate bearing the

Withdraw from occupied areas, asks Thatcher

LONDON, Jan 29, (Agencies): British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said in a newspaper interview published today that Israel must allow self-determination to the Palestinians, and called on Tel Aviv to withdraw from the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"I do sometimes say to Israel,
"he highest posfor whom I have the highest pos-sible regard: You cannot have self-determination for your own people and deny it to others. You cannot," she told Britain's The Star newspaper.

"Now Israel knows that Gaza and the West Bank do not belong to Israel legally. It knows that it cannot just annex them. You have, therefore, a festering grievance," Thatcher said.

She said a solution to the problem would be for those territories, captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war, to be part of a confederation with Jor-

But, Thatcher said: "It is only the United States that can persuade Israel to negotiate."

The British leader, regarded in Israel as an ally, repeated her support for an international conference on Middle East peace that would provide an umbrella for direct talks among the Israelis, Palestinians and Jordanians.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres yesterday rejected as unrealistic proposals to launch peace talks designed to carry out the Camp David promise of Palestinian auton-omy in the West Bank and Gaza iser to Peres left for Washington last night to discuss peace moves with US policymakers and aides to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. The UN Security Council remained deadlocked last night over a resolution on Israelioccupied territories, and diplomats discussed a compromise version that would avert a veto by the United States.

At least two draft resolutions were circulated in the 15-member council. Delegates said one had been sent to Washington for US consideration. However, a final draft had not been presented after two days of debate on Israel's handling of the Palestinian uprising.

Discussion was to continue today but no vote was scheduled. Some diplomats said the session might continue tomorrow.

Palestinians Episcopal bishop Elia Khoury urged Christian, Muslim and Jewish religious leaders yesterday to join Palestinian deportees on a planned voyage back to their homeland. Khoury is an Anglican assistant bishop of Jerusalem diocese and a member of the executive committee of the PLO.

He also told reporters 70 people had been killed, 400-500 wounded and some 6,000 detained in the protests which have swept the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip since last December. He declined for security reasons to give precise details of the ship's route and departure date, but said it would set out soon from Europe and land at the northern Israeli port of Haifa or another port on the same

Boeing jumbo jet tries to set round-the-globe speed record

SEATTLE, Jan 29. (UPI): A specially outfitted Boeing 747 jumbo jet carrying 100 passen-gers who paid $5,000 each, including former astronaut Neil Armstrong, took off last night in a quest to set a round-the-globe

Also on board were veteran test pilot Bob Hoover, former United Airlines chairman Edward Carlson. Moya Lear, wife of the late developer of the Lear jet, and former Seattle Seahawks quarterback Jim Zorn. Making only two 45-minute stops for refuelling, the crew of the jumbo jet will try to make it around the globe in less than 40 hours. Proceeds from the flight will be donated to various children's charities.

dominated south Indian politics for three decades. Ramachandran was a key sup-accord to end a Tamil separatist revolt on the island, and the state's continued support of the pact signed last year is considered by the central govern-ment as vital to its success. Lawmakers wrenched microphone from their desks to use as clubs flailed belts and flung heavy leather sandals at opponents. The speaker's bell, used to own across the chamber, eyewitnesses said.

The melee lasted about 15 minutes, during which outsiders also entered the chamber, and then police summoned by the assembly staff.

When order was restored -and Janaki supporters left nearly alone in the chamber — speaker P.H. Pandiyan called for the vote of confidence.
Janaki, who had gained sup-

"Constitutional rule has broken down in Tamil Nadu,' Jayalalitha faction leader S. Ramachandran told reporters after the vote Thirty- three legislators sup-

The riotous session served to widen the bitter split in the ruling bers in the 234-member house that governs India's southernmost state.

The state has 50 million residents who jealously guard their ancient Dravidian culture and language and seek to preserve them from encroachments from the north.

Janaki Ramachandran was named Chief Minister earlier this month after she persuaded the state governor she controlled the largest number of state legislators.

However, Jayalalitha claimed support for the AIADMK's grass roots supporters and was elected as party general secretary.

With no clear victor, Janaki was told by the governor her faction must submit to a confidence motion.

Afghans reach a critical point: Najib

MOSCOW, Jan 29,(Reuter): Afghan leader Najibullah has said the Afghan people are tired of war and have reached a critical turning point on the road to national reconciliation, the Soviet news agency Tass repor-

"A critical and turning point in the life of the people has come," Tass said, quoting from a report he gave to a two-day plenary meeting of the ruling People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan (PDPA) central committee which ended on Thursday.

Tass, quoting from a report by Afghanistan's Bakhtar news agency, said Najibullah had reviewed progress of a national reconciliation drive launched by Kabul a year ago.

"The main content of our activities is to solve the strategic tasks of ensuring peace and security, of creating a coalition government and a multi-party system and of consolidating the foundations of the state independent, neutral and nonaligned," he said.

"The people have got tired of war," he added. "They want peace and security. The realisation of this aspiration is the meaning of the national reconciliation policy and the meaning of our work and entire life."

Reconciliation

Najibullah's Soviet-backed government launched the national reconciliation drive in an attempt to end a war between Soviet and Afghan government troops and Western-backed Muslim fighters. "Over the year that has passed since the proclamation of the national reconciliation policy of Afghanistan, a transition from slogans to a whole system of measures in the political, economic, military, social, international and other fields has occurred," Najibullah said.

Kuwait calls for urgent efforts to protect Palestinians

UNITED NATIONS, Jan 29, (Kuna): Kuwait called vesterday for an urgent effort by the international community to ensure the protection and safety of the civilian population in the occupied territories.

This short-term measure should be followed by a comprehensive dealing with the problem of the Palestinians "as a political problem, not a problem as refugees." Kuwait's permanent representative Mohammad A. Abulhassan said.

The Kuwaiti official spoke on the second day of the Security Council's debate of the secretarygeneral's report on the situation in the occupied territories.

Abulhassan said the international community must impress upon Israel that, as an occupying power, it is responsible for the protection and safety of the civilian population.

He called upon the contracting states of the fourth Geneva convention of 1949 to convince Israel that the convention is applicable to the territories.

We support the idea of addressing an official call to the contracting parties of the convention to use all ways and means at their disposal to impress upon Israel the need to apply that convention," he said.

Promote With regard to the long-term solution of the Palestinian ques-tion, Abulhassan said the Islamic states continued to believe a peaceful settlement is attainable if there is a will to do so.

The best means to achieve this would be an international peace conference on the Middle East. attended by the five permanent council members and other concerned parties, including the Palestine Liberation Organisa-

Abulhassan described the Palestinian uprising as the beginning of a new stage in the strug-

"It is a firm rejection by Pales-tinians of all walks of life of that occupation under which they have languished for the last 20 years ... It also reaffirms that the continued occupation of the Arab territories would lead to more bloodshed," he said.

Consultations

Soviet delegate Aleksandre Belanogov also supported the idea of an appeal to the parties to the Geneva Convention to persuade Israel to accept its applicability to the occupied territories.

He said the council must urgently prepare the international peace conference and the council's members, especially the permanent members, should engage in consultations to that

The consultations, which should be on the foreign minister level, could give an added thrust to finding ways to emerge from the deadlock in the negotiations,

"The Soviet Union calls on Israel to join in the broad international consensus for the convening of the international conference," Belonogov said.

Qatar's permanent representative Hamad Abdelaziz Al Kawari said the council should act to protect the civilians in the occupied territories.

Destiny He said an appeal or a resolution to urge Israel to apply the Geneva Convention would not make Israel comply.
"What is needed is a particular mechanism that will ensure a follow-up by the council," Al Kawari said.

He called for a just and lasting settlement that respected the right of the Palestinian people to determine their destiny, their right to self-determination and to establish an independent state under the leadership of the PLO.

"A new generation of Palestinians has opened their eyes to Israeli occupation, a generation which is prepared to use all means available to it to fight for their rights," he said.

The international community must face up to the challenge posed by the Palestinian people,

Information campaign to improve awareness on AIDS

LONDON, Jan 29, (Agencies): Kuwait's Minister of Planning Dr Abdul Rahman Al Awadi left London today after taking part in the just concluded world summit on AIDS.

The minister led the Kuwaiti delegation to the three-day ministerial conference which was attended by 150 countries, the largest in the first-ever global meeting on a single disease.

Awadi called on the international community to concentrate on the protection "to guard this and future generations" from the great dangers of the killer virus. The 150 countries represented at the world's first global conference on AIDS have pledged to killer disease in a massive yearlong international information Officals of the World Health Organisation, co-sponsor with the British government of the three-day meeting, which ended yesterday, heralded 1988 as the international year of AIDS communication.

They said Dec I would be declared "AIDS appreciation day" when people worldwide will be asked to interrupt work to discuss the epidemic and ways of protecting themselves.

"We are convinced that by prompting responsible behaviour and through international cooperation we can and will begin now to slow the spread of the human immuno-deficiency virus (HIV)," the conference said in a London declaration on AIDS.

Up to 10 million people world-wide are believed to be infected with the virus, which can lead to acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which destroys the body's abilityto fight diseases.

The conference, the largest ever gathering of ministers to discuss a health issue, was unanmost effective way to curb AIDS. "In the absence of a vaccine or cure for AIDS, the single most important component of national AIDS programmes is information and education, because transmission can be prevented through informed and responsible behaviour," the declaration said.

Israeli repressive policy doomed to fail

A KUWAITI newspaper yesterday said that Israel is running out of choices to face the current uprising in the occupied territories, affirming that the Israeli repressive policy against Palestinians is

At Rai At Aam, in a front-page editorial, described the uprising as σ conflict between a "Palestinian land owner and a fearing and embezzling Israeli," who tries to impose himself with all inhumane means in vain. The paper said that despite the support given to Israel from its allies, it will remain weak because "it was born fliegitimately, colonizes a land that does not belong to it and lives in a foreign environment which it does not fit in." Force by itself does not bring about peace, nor does confiscating.

lands and kicking out their owners, it stressed. Al Rai Al Aam on Thursday noted that the British stance toward key Arab Issues, chiefly the Palestinian cause, has changed to the better recently, especially after the visit made by Minister of State at the Foreign Office David Mellor to the occupied territories. The daily cited that Mellor said, "moral and ethical supremacy does not come from the barrel of a gun and Israel will pay a dear price to control the current situation in the (occupied) West Bank The paper described Mellor's statements as the "clearest and strongest in the series of British policies and stands toward the ongoing Arab-Israeli conflict It noted that Europeans no longer believe in the myth saying that "occupation achieves security." adding that British was able to understand the facts about the difficult circumstances Palestinians lived under for the past 20 years. "That's why the new British position was a starting point for a more positive British policy, particularly on the Arab-Israeli conflict and the need for real and comprehensive peace in the Middle East,"

Co-operatives become essential part of society

ALI Abu Hadida, chairman of the Union of Co-operative Societies told a seminar organised by a Kuwaiti newspaper that the co-ops in Kuwait had become an essential part of the society. He said that there are 38 co-ops at present and a new one will open in the near future.

Abu Hadida pointed out that the co-ops promote locally made products and protect them from foreign competition. He said that 80 per cent of local products are marketted through the co-ops.

The head of Shamiya Co-op, Abdul Mohsen Al Zaben told the

However, Bassem said that most of this money was spent on gifts for outstanding students in each area, or on mosques. He said that the union needed to co-ordinate the spending of this money, and pointed out that in other countries, like Egypt and the Yemen: these cooperative profits were used for . projects such as paving roads or opening health centres.

Ban on repeating courses

DR Mustafa Marafie, the Dean of Admissions and Registration at Kuwait University, said that students would not be allowed to repeat courses in an attempt to earn a higher grade and that according to the new system, students who had completed more than 45 credit hours would not be allowed to change to a different discipline.

The dean said that graduation certificates would be presented to students within the next two weeks and attributed the delay to the failure of teachers to submit results on time.

Graduates who are looking for jobs and need to submit their graduation certificates, he said, could use their statemement of grades for the last term until the certificates were completed.

Dr Marafie added that under the new system economics students would be allowed to change to computer studies, provided they complied with specific conditions.

SHALLOW men believe in luck — Ralph Waldo Emerson, US writer (1803-1882).

OPINION Uprising must continue

IT is absolutely essential that the Palestinian uprising continues — to halt it would mean to revert to 1948 when Israel was established in Palestine. On that day, official Arab regimes told the Palestinians to live in tents for "just a few days" and then they would be returned to their homeland. They were told to wait "just a few days" while the United Nations and Arab Armies would destroy the Israeli Army and would regain Palestine.

But the Palestinians waited in tents for 40 years until they began their national uprising 50 days ago. And this is a true uprising, representing a new generation of Palestinians, who really desire the restoration of Palestinian lands rather than sympathy and emotion.

Since this is the first uprising to begin within the occupied territories, it has frightened the Israelis. It is an uprising with direct resistance to the occupation forces rather than an uprising in other Arab countries.

In 1948 a number of Arab regimes maintained that the role of the Arab world should be to support the resistance against Israeli occupation, with supplies and through the people in Palestine. These regimes believed that it was more effective to work from inside to support the revolution in their resistance to occupation forces as was done between France and Algeria and as is now happening in Afghanistan.

The support for the uprising inside Palestine by widespread Arab efforts, motivated by jihad and resistance to the occupation, guarantees that the uprising will continue, even though the tangible weapons are only stones.

As the uprising continues, these stones will become small guns, which in turn will become larger guns. The Afghan revolution began in a similar, modest way, ending with the Soviet recognition that their occupation of Afghanistan was a mistake.

Although there are differences between Afghanistan and Palestine, the significance between the two is that with continued resistance from within Palestine, their revolution would surpass that which we have seen in

The continuation of the uprising depends on Palestinians within their country receiving the necessary support, supervised by honest and dedicated people and is the responsibility of all Arabs.

Italy wrestles with its terrorist past

By Barry Moody

ROME, (Reuter): Bitter memories of the late 1970s are haunting Italians as they argue passionately over whether to pardon. jailed urban guerrillas.

It is now a decade since the so called "years of lead" when Italy. was shaken to the roots by a violent and well-planned offensive by the left-wing Red Brigades. Seventeen public figures were killed between 1977 and 1980 and the 10th anniversary of the most harrowing episode, the murder of former Prime Minister Aldo Moro, will be marked on March

But those years, when killings, "kneecappings" and other violence were an almost daily occurrence, caused deep scars and the issue still provokes emotional discussion among Italians.

Sandaro Pertini, 91, President during some of the worst violence, reacted angrily to recent suggestions that jailed guerrillas should be released as a way of closing one of the most anguished chapters of Italian his-

Unrepentant

"These people are not repentant. They are just louts who want to get out of jail." he told réporters.

In a telegram to the Corriere Della Sera newspaper he declared: "I am decidedly against any act of clemency towards terrorists. It would be a dangerous act of weakness by the Italian state.'

Pertini's views were echoed by many politicians, newspapers, and relatives of guerrilla victims. An opinion poll for the magazine Epoca said nearly 70 per cent of Italians were against the idea. Nevertheless, there are signs that pressure may be growing for some form of clemency towards the 800 jailed guerrillas.

stimulated by a desire to heal the wounds of the past. The debate gathered pace after the return to Italy earlier this month of Franco Piperno, 45, former leader of the"workers power"group, who fled to Canada to escape arrest in 1981. Piperno came back to appeal against a 10-year sentence for subversion and belonging to an armed gang. He raised emotions further with series of unrepentant statements, but his return appeared influenced by a belief that a pardon could be possible. The climate in Italy is changing.Conditions are developing for a more calm debate despite the understandable anguish and uncertainty," he told a television interviewer.

There is a wound in Italian history that would be healed with an amnesty." he said. Proponent

The leading political advocate of some form of clemency is Flaminio Piccoli, president of the Christian Democrat International and once a tough opponent of negotiating with terrorists.

"A gesture of comprehension by the state would have great value because it would underline the confident strength of democracy," he said at a recent public

"The return to society of defeated members of the armed party would immunise the minds and consciences of young people against political myths founded

Former judge Ferdinando Imposimato, a member of the opposition Communist Party, Parliament's second biggest group after the Christian Democrats, said an "act of reconciliation" would be an important signal for between 200 and 300 guerrillas from both right and left believed still at

Tel Aviv producing plutonium for nuclear weapons

By E.A. Wayne

WASHINGTON: Allegations, that Israel is violating international norms in its desire to build an effective nuclear deterrent are spotlighted in two new reports.

The first, by nuclear-proliferation specialist Gary Milhollin, says that Israel is apparently violating a promise of "peaceful use" which it gave to Norway.

The Israelis appear to be producing plutonium for weapons with imported Norwegian "heavy water," says Mil-hollin, a professor of law at the University of Wisconsin and a former nuclear proliferation consultant to the United States Defence Department.

Milhollin also says Israel may have violated a similar pledge to the United States.

The second study — by free-lance writer Mark Gaffney, who is preparing a book on Israel's nuclear programme — examines allegations of secret nuclearweapons cooperation between Israel and South Africa.If that cooperation were proved true, it would violate US law.

Significant

Milhollin says US and Western credibility in opposing the spread of nuclear weapons is in question. If Israel is breaking international pledges, he con-tends, it has to be treated as firmly as other nations that are thought to be developing nuclear weapons.

If the West is seen to apply selective proliferation. Milhollin says, others will break the rules. The danger of Israel's warheads. he adds, is that they could well be thermonuclear weapons. Dimona uses heavy water to produce plutonium. Twenty tons of this heavy water. Milhollin says, came from Norway in 1959. Israel pledged that it would be used only for peaceful purposes and that Norway could inspect

Milhollin, however, discovered that Norway had never inspected the water to verify the peaceful-use pledge.

After these findings were publicised, the Norwegian government asked Israel to allow the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to inspect the heavy water. Israel said "no" in September. Milhollin says that during Norwegian-Israeli talks, Israel admitted using the heavy water at Dimona and producing plutonium with it.

Norway has the right to inspect the water and to test to see if it has been use 1 to produce plutonium, Milh Ilin says. If the tests are positive he says, Norway should demand to see the plutonium produced from it. If any weapons have been made with it. Norway would have the right to have them dismantled, Milhollin argues. Norwegian Foreign Ministry spokesman Per Paust says Israel refused IAEA inspection, arguing that the agency would be "biased." He says, however, that Israel has repeatedly assured Norway that the water's use has been consistent with the agreement.

Paust says Norway is now preparing for talks to ensure Norwegian inspection of the water. Norway had not yet made a decision about recalling its water, would probably not close down the Dimona reactor, although it would have operational consequencies.

Israel is known to have acquired 3.9 tons of heavy water from the US and reportedly received an unknown amount from France in the early 1960s. (Milhollin says any water sent from France would have been supplied originally by the US or Norway, with the promise that France not export it.)

Since heavy water is expensive to produce and lasts a long time in reactors. Milhollin says, the Dimona reactor is in all likelihood operating on some combination of water from these sour-ces. He estimates that Dimona currently uses 36 tons of water, though its original plans called for 18 tons.

The four tons supplied by the US were originally shipped to Dimona, Milhollin says, but subsequently moved to another facility. The IAEA has inspected that water since the early 1980s, but before that the US was responsible for ensuring peaceful use, Milhollin and US officials

The IAEA has never tested this water, however, to see if it was previously used to make plutonium, Milhollin says. Nor is there evidence that the US tested it earlier, he says. (US experts visited Dimona yearly from 1963 to 1969.)

US officials confirm that the IAEA has not conducted such tests. Those queried said they were not informed about what the US did before, the IAEA took over. Milhollin contends that the US should ask that the water be inspected and should encourage Israel to respect Norway's inspection rights.

Ambiguous

The Israeli Embassy in Washington had "no comment" when asked about this matter. Israel retains an ambiguous public stance on whether or not it possesses nuclear weapons.

To date Israel has not been found to violate any US law in its nuclear activities. But US officials say the US does not have a peaceful nuclear cooperation agreement with Israel, because that country refuses to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty or to accept international safeguards at all of its nuclear America's laws on nuclear non-proliferation were written beginning in the late 1970s with Israel in mind, US officials who work on nuclear questions concede. Israel already had the technology and know-how to produce bombs before relevant US laws were enacted. The laws penalise the import and export of weapons or technology as well as weapons testing. Thus they exclude countries indigenously developing nuclear weapons, like Israel or India. US experts say. Gaffney's study of Israel's nuclear programme, published in the fall issue of American-Arab Affairs, revives the charge that Israel cooperates with South Africa in the development and testing of nuclear weapons. He says those two countries signed a secret nuclear cooperation agreement in the 1970s, which included a common effort to develop a neutron bomb. South Africa allegedly provided uranium and testing space while Israel provided expertise.

Gaffney contends that the mysterious flashes reportedly seen by a US spy satellite in 1979 and '80 over South Africa were nuclear blasts and probably tests of an Israeli-developed neutron bomb. He says the US explanations at the time of error by a satellite were probably disingen-

US officials familiar with the events say they could have been nuclear tests, but whether they were and who was involved remain unclear. The officials add that there is no firm proof of any Israeli nuclear bomb tests, or of such nuclear cooperation with

South Africa. Leonard Spector, a non-proliferation specialist at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, says Israel's close cooperation with South Africa in conventional military research and development (cooperation made public by the US earlier this year) lends credence to reports of nuclear cooperation. But there is no hard proof, he Spector says, however, that the US heavy-water issue raises new questions about US involvement in Israel's nuclear programme. Most people assume he says, that the US winked at the programme but did

But if US heavy water was used to produce plutonium in the 1960s and '70s and never inspected, it is a major "blot on our copybook, Spector says.

For Spector and Milhollin, the importance of the heavy-water issue is directly tied to the advance of Israel's nuclear programme. The most authoritative public account of it came from Mordechai Vanunu. the technician who worked at Israel's Dimona facility for nine years and in the fall of 1986 gave a thorough interview to London's Sunday Times.

That account shows a rapidly enlarging programme, including advanced weapons design, thermonuclear-bomb mastery, and computer-simulated testing. Spector says. US officials say Vanunu's account is technically credible and plausible.

Concern The need for concern is heightened, Spector says, by Israel's new medium-range missile. capable of carrying nuclear weapons to parts of the Soviet Union. Unidentified Israeli officials have hinted to the press that the missile could serve as a potential deterrent to Soviet reinforcement of Syria. Radio Moscow warned earlier this year that Moscow might have to respond in some way if the missile is deployed and asked if the missile was a way for the US to compensate for potential withdrawal of Pershing 2 missiles from Europe under an INF

A former US official who specialises in Israeli affairs says Israel apparently still sees its nuclear weapons as an ultimate deterrent. The new missile, he says, adds accuracy and speed to this deterrent. But there are no signs it is aimed at the USSR, nor that Israel is considering a nuclear war-fighting strategy. Syria is seeking a chemical weapons capability to counter Israel's nuclear threat, he adds.

US non-proliferation credibility (and evenhandedness) must be maintained US officials agree, but non-proliferation has to be addressed along with the range of US interests in each country and region.

Officials who specialise in nuclear questions agree more attention is needed to the flow of heavy water. But they say that when Israel was given its heavy water in the early 1960s. safeguards were not a big issue and the idea of peaceful nuclear power was in full swing. Finally, officials and congressional specialists agree there is little political will in Washington to turn over stones to pin things on Israel," as one put it.

Japan scrambles for ways to cut urban land prices

By Linda Sleg

TOKYO, (Reuter): Rocketing urban land prices have prompted a series of schemes to move the capital of Japan from Tokyo, or at any rate disperse some of the Political pressure to cut land prices without provoking a fall that could undermine Japan's financial system is prompting a spate of relocation schemes although plans to move the capital are nothing new.

In 1978 economist Toshiaki Honda suggested shifting the capital to the same line of latitude as London - a move he later discovered would have put the nation's political and economic centre firmly on Russian soil. Plans

Among the suggested_alternatives to overcrowded Tokyo are the western cities of Osaka, Kyoto and Kobe the northest city of Sendai Nagoya in central Japan, a proposed man-made island in Tokyo Bay, and a yet-to-be-built city near Mount Fuji.

Another plan would move the capital to a site 150 to 250 km (90 to 150 miles) from Tokyo, to be made accessible by magnetically levitated trains capable of travelling 500 kph (300 mph).

Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, who has put land prices high on his political agenda, has told government agencies to list facilities which could be moved out of Tokyo as one way to spur decentralisation.

For the moment, economic forces are moving in the opposite direction and there is a concentration of population, business and finance, and government as well as a modern service sector in Germany, once the darling of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (Nato) is looking more like its problem child. A big spender on Western mediate-range Nuclear Forces defence and the front-line home of allied forces. West Germany has always scored top marks as a star pupil among the Nato European allies. In the autumn of 1983, it lived up to its model status by riding out an onslaught of protest from its anti-nuclear weapons lobby and deploying US Cruise and Pershing-2 nuclear missiles. Now, as Nato faces crucial choices on nuclear planning, the same Bonn government is breaking ranks with its allies on arms control and looks more like the

The German problem inside Nato has crystallised around the question of nuclear planning following the US-Soviet Intermodernise these weapons. Bonn argues that its territory, on the Central Europe front-line, is uniquely threatened by the Warsaw Pact's 1,400 or so shortrange missiles.

Army beatings indiscriminate

By Masha Hamilton

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip, (AP): Mahmud Mohammed Alian lay in a coma, shivering, in a bed at the Gaza Sisip's largest hospital. Bruises discoloured his chest and left arm.

Alian, 58, is a victim of Israel's much-criticised tactic of using beatings instead of bullets to put down anti-Israeli riots that began seven weeks ago in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Arab hospital official's said

Israeli soldiers have beaten about 600 Palestinians in the Gaza City area alone, many of them indiscriminately. They said about 20 per cent are women. Israeli lawyer Felicia Langer, who represents Palestinians.

filed a complaint with the attorney general's office on behalf of 19 Gazans who claim they were beaten or shot although they were not protesting. Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin has defended the beating policy, which he said began Jan 5.

He said clubs are less deadly than rifles and soldiers had been ordered to use beatings to contain riots, not as street-corner justice. Rabin added on Israel Radio, however, that he had reports of indiscriminate beatings and "we are taking actions against those (soldiers) who are and were engaging in them." Rajde Irhim, 48, his son and his brother lay side by side in beds near Alian at Shifa Hospital in Rajde Irhim's right leg and arm were in casts. An intravenous tube was taped to the wrist of his 19-year-old son. The 35-yearold brother held out an arm blistered and blue from beatings.

Irhim said they were beaten by Israeli soldiers who, burst into their home about 10 O'clock one night last week. He said they were taken to an empty railroad station in Gaza City, questioned. beaten and left there.

Friends said none of the Irhims or Alian were demonstrating when soldiers chose them. Other patients in Shifa and nearby Ahli Arab Hospital also said they were beaten in their homes or on the street, but not during protests. Such claims are not easy to prove, but most protests have involved Palestinians under age 30, while several victims of beatings are in their 50s, 60s and even

Ali Shatar. 19, sat in a blue bathrobe at Shifa, both arms in casts up to the shoulders, his foot wrapped in bandages. Shatar's mother, Safiya, held an orange

Field workers for the United Nations say they have dozens of reports of Israeli soldiers, apparently concentrating on a troublesome neighbourhood, going into homes at night and beating an eatire family.

Sports week on TV

with cartoons.
This is in addition to the two weekly shows — Sports Studio on Thursday and Friday.

This week's best-seller is Ford about the life of Henry Ford, at 10.30 pm on Sunday night. The mini-series, A Year in the Life, continues on Monday nights about the changing fortunes of a middle-class American family,

Thursday's movie The Con-queror features John Wayne and Susan Hayward. Listed in the book "The Fifty Worst Films of All Time," this 1956 production relates the adven-tures of Genghis Khan (Wayne) the Mongol warrior who conquered the world as well as the heart of the Princess Bortai (played by Susan Hayward).

Čine Club has not been listed in this week's schedule but an untitled feature film, starring Burt Reynolds and Candice Bergen, will be shown at 10.30 pm on Tuesday.

Next week, hopefully, there'll be less sports and more entertainment on KTV 2. Per-haps, it is wishful thinking.

Sports Studio on weekend, plus additional football and show jumping, is scheduled for showing this week.

This week on KTV 2

Shirley Bassey: generation gap beater

By Judy Byrne

MADONNA may be the sex kitten of the day, but remember Shirley Bassey? At fifty, she still looks a sexy 30 and she intends to keep it that way.

"I have always been a sex symbol. I was the same as Madonna in my day. I was banned from American, Italian, French and Spanish television. I was raunchy. And I paved the way."

The timeless tigress of Tiger Bay — now a grandmother — is showing the young uns how to do it. She recently rejoined the charts in the company of Swiss group Yello and their hit single The Rhythm Divine. And she likes the company she finds herself keeping. Shirley Bassey is a genuine generation gap beater. Teen-agers love her. So do their parents and their parents' parents. When they ask for her autograph, they often ask for a second one to take home to Keeping her body so beautiful requires effort and discipline. She plays tennis, swims when she can, does regular yoga and, when she packs to go on tour, one of the first things to go into her luggage is a set of weights.

She is now a vegetarian. She hardly smokes and she has relegated alcohol — an old friend and sometimes support — to a more minor role in her life. These days she keeps it for birthdays and weddings.

Shirley says: "I stopped because I felt I'd been through all that. It wasn't really me. Feeling rotten the next day, staying in bed, missing some of the action. 'What am I doing?' I thought."

But even that is small beer compared to the major change in her life. The sexy woman who used to say she could not live without the love of a man has learned to live alone. And to

"I have always had people around me," she says, "Now, for the first time, I have no livein lover, no housekeeper, no secretary, no one," she says.

The superstar from Tiger Bay, Shirley Bassey on stage.

She did not take to the solitary life right from the start. "I was terrified at first." she says. "It was not a deliberate decision to try living alone. It was just circumstances.

'In the past, it had always been off with the old and on with the new. There would always be someone waiting in the wings when I ended with a boyfriend. This time there was not and I was terrified for the first year.
"Two years further on, I can honestly say it is great."

Poverty

If Bassey is a late convert to celibacy, she has not given up the friendship of men. Nor has she closed the door on the possibility of a new love in the future. "I like men," she says. 'I wouldn't rule them right

Shirley's childhood had been one of deep — and deeply resented — poverty. The humiliation heaped on the youngest of eight children. growing up in the tough Tiger Bay area of Cardiff burned deep. And were exorcised expensively.

Clothes were always handme-downs for the girl who slept three-in-a-bed with two sisters and never had a doll of her own. "I hated being so poor," she

"I remember once going to a shoe-menders with an old pair of sandals and being turned away because the man said there wasn't enough leather left to repair them again." Today, the daughter of an African father and an English mother left to bring up her brood alone, has put an insulating barrier of diamonds. sequins and furs between herself and the bitter memories of childhood.

And it has left her with a thirst she can never quite slake for luxury and glamour.

There's no place like a plush suite at the Dorchester to make her feel completely at home.

Bassey, twice married, mother three times and grandmother once so far, has certainly packed a whole lot of living into her first half century. And come a long way from her first job at 14, earning £3 a week packing chamber pots in a fac-

As she worked, she dreamt. A man had told her that with her voice she could be a star. Itwas the only way out of poverty she could see. And she helped herself through the day by singing so long and loud they used to shout at her to shut up. Now audiences go wild to hear that voice. And Shirley Bassey still uses singing to come to terms with life. More than that, she admits she would not be half the performer she is today were it not for the living. loving and losing that goes into every performance. She says: "I couldn't sing the way I do if it wasn't for the good and bad times. The sadness, the ups-and-downs, the men I've known - it all goes into my songs.

Even when her daughter, Samantha, died two years ago, Shirley went ahead with an American tour. "I suppose I've always eased the pain by singing," she says.

Revenge

That time, though, her body took its revenge, Shirley could not beat the grief that left her shattered when Samantha, 21. was found floating in the River Avon near Bristol, not far from a notorious suicide spot. Samantha had emotional and drink problems but she had seemed to be on the mend. And she left no note to suggest she planned to take her own life. The inquest into her death could not determine whether it was suicide or an accident.

Shirley says: "I'll never get over it completely. How I ever came out of it at all, I'll never know. I am grieving still and I don't know if it will ever stop.

young. She was such a tomboy but gentle. She loved animals and she was like a beautiful young wild animal herself. You could not cage her."

"She was like me when I was Bassey the beautiful talked to few people about her grief. When she shared it at all it was with her audiences. And if anyone supported her through the initial shock it was her fans.

When she walked on stage at the Carnegie Hall in New York the audience rose up like a single person and applauded the courage that had got her there. "It meant so much to me," she

"And it was like that night after night. The audience were helping me, comforting me with their understanding."

But the woman who had never had a singing lesson in her life let the tension creep into her throat. It robbed her of her voice twice. She went to voice specialist Helen Shenel for her first-ever voice tuition.

Mrs Shenel says: "It would be insulting to say I was teaching her to sing. She has the most wonderful natural voice. But with anyone, bad habits creep

She found Shirley "an absolute delight to work with". And she was thrilled when, after her first night back on stage, Ms Bassey sent her a dozen orchids. She said: "I though it was very sweet to do that on top of a very fat fee."

Lrony The irony is that when Shirley Bassey first began to perform, she was told that she was too wooden and would be until she'd had some experience of suffering. Once she started. she went straight for overkill. It was impessario Mike Sullivan who taught her how to walk on stage and get an audience eating out of her hand and who also told her she had to stop singing with her head and start doing it with her heart. An eight-month affair with television producer Robert Hartford-David cured that. And it left her with a compulsion to be the one who always walked out first.

His freedom to travel for as long as he has and his other privileges have earned him a reputation among cognoscenti as a man who toes the line to keep his privileges. Whatever the techniques for getting there, Semyonov has some rare freedoms. "We can't find another case like him: He's a first," comments Leonard Sussman, executive director of Freedom House, referring to Semyonov's ability not only to publish in the West but to take a press tour alone, promoting his

a longtime between- the-lines crusader for reform, whose time has come with the advent of Mr Gorbachev. "I was the first to put into a novel (in 1971) the name of (Nikolai) Bukharin with positive meaning," he says, referring to the Bolshevik revolutionary purged under Stalin. "I proposed positions in my novels published in early '70s: I said we need individual labour, we need individual cafes, restaurants, cars, and so on and so on. It was only me who published it in Soviet press. I did it."

He acknowledges, however, that he has made compromises to stay out of trouble, following an "I'd rather switch than fight" philosophy. In fact, he has more than stayed out of trouble. He drives a volvo wagon, has an apartment and atelier in Moscow, a dacha outside Moscow, and a villa on the Black Sea. He sports gold bracelets and a ring with a 40carat diamond — a gift, he jokes, from "the dictatorship of the proletariat."

Compromise

At one point in the interview, he says flatly that he compromises because "I want to be free, I want to travel, I want to enjoy life." The price for these privileges has been ready acquiescence to the censor's pen: "How do you succeed? With compromises. You cut some parts of your novels. I've cut things out of all my books."

Taking that road has given him access to the mighty and the mysterious in the Soviet government

He says, for instance, that when his novel "No Passport Needed" appeared, then-KGB head Yuri Andropov was inspired to call him on the phone and invite him in for a lete-atete that opened KGB files for future books.

the Soviet leader. "Why don't you ask his publishers where they get the chutz-pah to say that?" asks Ray Benson, who just returned from four years as counsel for press and culture at the US Embassy in Moscow. Neverthcless, he acknowledges that Semyonov is widely believed to have special access to the power centres of the Soviet government. Semyonov presents a figure in motion during an hour-long chat at an outdoor cafe here. He shifts around constantly in his chair, gesturing frequently with his large, fleshy hands, smoking a string of cigarettes, obviously enjoying his ability to handle questions that arise.

Does he, for instance, believe that the CIA takes orders from industrial bosses, as his books indicate?

"May I ask you, who was author of these three words: 'military-industrial complex'"? He asks rhetorically, going on to give a lengthy description of the term coined by then-President Eisenhower. "So I want to explain to my readers that there is a big difference between bankers, industrialists, businessmen here in US involved in constructing houses, building roads, planes, and so on and so on and so on . And there exists a military-industrial complex with which you and I disagree." But does he think these industrial managers tell the CIA what to do?

"His characters fit the cliches," Mr Benson observes. "But I suspect our guys do the same thing, too.'

Semyonov's declamations on current events are sometimes remarkably direct, however.

"During two years, we have graduated from the university of democracy," he declares. Then he asks: "Don't you think there should be a monument to journalists in Moscow for what they have accomplished in the last two years?"

When science and philosophy come together

COSMIC Understanding: Phiosophy and Science of the Universe, by Milton K. Munitz Princeton, N.J.: Princeton Uni-ersity Press. 288 pp. $25. Whether pursued as a scientific discipline, a leisure-time interest, or a basis for philosothe universe has been sought for all of recorded history. As Milton Munitz tells us in "Cosmic Understanding," this search for a satisfying cosmology comes from two principal motives. The first is purely intellectual curiosity and a sense of wonder. The second derives from the need to situate numanity in the universe. This book is a philosophical quest. Munitz himself has spent a long career searching both philosophy and modern scientific theory. He is distinguished professor of philosophy emeritus at the City University of New York. In 1957, he edited "Theories of the Universe" — a collection of cosmologies from Plato and Aristotle to Hubble, Einstein, and modern cosmologists. Earher he wrote "Space. Time and Creation," a critical evaluation of cosmology.

Modern

Munitz has set an ambitious oal for his readers in "Cosmic Understanding." He says: "By. studying the materials of contemporary scientific cosmology, a principal goal of the present inquiry is ... to come within sight of the main outlines of an ontology (a world view) in which we can discern the principal lines of differentiation and interconnection among three crucial ontological dimensions of existence - namely the universe as exis-

Boundless Existence. Modern cosmology differs a great deal from earlier aftempts to understand the cos mos. Modern measurements have produced a large number of facts. Modern cosmologists demand that as many as possible of these facts arise from the simplest possible first cause. At the present stage of inquiry, there is the curious case of a very low-intensity radio noise signal that may be a clue to the tent, human existence, and

In the 1940s, George Gamov. Raiph Alpher, and Robert Herman put forth an idea that the universe began in a highly condensed state and at a very high temperature - a big bang. From this beginning, they predicted an expansion that in our time would result in the existence of a universal background isotropic microwave radiation at about 5 degrees Kelvin. In 1965, Arno Penzias and Robert Wilson at Rell Laboratories discovered an incliminable microwave noise signal in their radio antenna, which they were able to show was isotropic and extragalactic in source. This microwave radiation is characterized by an extremely low temperature of about 3 degrees K. Could it be the "glow" of a uniform gas of photons that has undergone cooling during the cosmologies. At first these models were static-that is, no big bang, no beginning — a rather uninteresting situation. Then, in the early 1920s, Friedequations of general relativity allowed solutions that were nonstatic. This allowed the bigbang ideas of Gamov and others to be included in the framework of relativity, and eventually led to the current very interesting ideas, which Munitz explains lucidly. "He (Spinoza) was concerned, as were traditional religions, with becoming aware of and appropriately responsive to the timate source of our being. For what Spinoza wishes to ask, at the bottom, is how the world in the astronomic, cosmologic sense — whatever its detailed structure is said to be - is related to God (ultimate reality). And to this question Spinoza has a definite and, for his time, revolutionary answer. For he maintains, far from being distinct realities, God, Nature, and the cosmos are one and the same.'

Although Spinoza built on the scientific theories of his day, a lot has happened since in the development of physical theories of the universe. And being a philosopher, Munitz must eventually ask, "For does not the prominence and wide-different view of the bound-understanding maybe?" This is where modern philosophy fits with the highpowered, mathematically driven, observationally proven and disproven cosmology of the scientist. Munitz - with a discussion of other philosophies, and modern physics raises the questions of being.

This is a book to be argued with, argued from, listened to, objected to, learned from, respected, agreed with, and disagreed with.

Munitz, far from proposing all the answers in either the philosophical or the physical discussions, poses the questions and provides tantalizing directions of inquiry for the reader. As Munitz himself points out, "Whatever the similarities or continuities of our own situation with the problems faced by thinkers in earlier epochs may be, we must do our own work afresh." NEW YORK: At the moment, the human record — the collected wisdom of scholars and scribblers — may endure no longer than the paper it is printed on.

All one has to do to confirm the perishable nature of the printed word is visit the sprawling stacks of the New York Public Library, where a book pulled at random from a shelf recently scattered a flurry of disintegrated pages, and potentially lost knowledge, across the floor. But there is new hope that the knowledge, if not the paper, in such books will endure.

Far-flung efforts to bring the best research, technology, and cooperative thinking to bear on the problem seem to many informed observers to be bearing fruit. The prospect appears nearer than ever for a single national agenda and a system for identifying and housing the great body of treasured documents.

In the wake of bleak predictions over the past several years that only a fraction of this heritage could be saved, those engaged in the battle have begun to offer, cautiously, a more optimistic assessment.

"Clearly, there are people in Congress who see the problem for what it is," says Warren J. Hass, president of the Council on Library Resources (CLR) in Washington, D.C. Initiatives in New York State, Wisconsin, Maine, and New Jersey are part of what he sees as a snowballing momentum on behalf of paper preservation.

Today, Dr Vartan Gragorian, president and chief executive officer of the New York Public Library, characterises the problem as "awesome, not gloomy.' The proportions of the task, he acknowledges, are massive. Because of the acidity of paper used in printing since about 1850, as well as environmental and usage factors, 76 million volumes in America's major research libraries alone are in danger of disintegrating, according to the National Endowment for the Humanities. That's enough books to fill a shelf stretching from Boston to Dallas; and all of them could be lost in the next 20 to 30 years. The CLR has estimated that the cost of saving even a third of these volumes is $384 mil-

Various advances in the technology of paper preservation (most notably a mass deacidification method being pioneered by the US Library of Congress) have offered some promise; but, so far, no definitive solution to what librarians call a national and international emergency has emerged. The result is that "We are about to lose a large portion of our cultural beritage, and that of other cultures as well," says Jeffrey Field, assistant preservation officer at the National Endowment for the Humani-

This alarming prospect has led research librarians and others to pursue a national system for storing and retrieving those essential records of scholarship that make up our cultural and intellectual heritage; and that goal seems at least within view.

"Ten years from now, there will be a new national collection of preserved materials to which the country's researchers will have access," Mr Haas says flatly.

This collection, he suggests, may either be housed in a single facility, such as the Center for Research Libraries in Chicago, or as a diverse collection scattered throughout the nation's research libraries and accessible through a data-link system. The specific form of the library is of less concern, however, than how compre-

How much of our precious heritage, and that of other cultures, can be retrieved and made accessible to scholars and the general public?

hensive its collection turns out

That question - and the equally troubling one of who will decide what gets saved and what must perish - are the principal challenges facing the nation's leading research libraries and their recently formed National Commission on Preservation and Access. The commission is just beginning to wrestle with the tangle of technological, ethical, and historical issues, as well as the vast scope of the paper disintegration problem.

Existence

But many observers see the very existence of the commission, which has its first meeting last April, as one sign among many that the issue has been joined. "We've reached critical mass in the number of libraries that have jumped on the bandwagon," observes Gay Walker, head of the preservation department at Yale Library. "In 1979, only one library other than the Library of Congress really had any kind of preservation program." Now, she adds, between 30 and 40 major institutions are engaged in such programs, including 20 of the 32 members of the Library Research Group. Other encouraging signs include a heightened awareness of the paper deterioration problem and an increasing readiness among corporations to underwrite efforts to preserve our printed heritage. (Exxon for instance, recently funded a new Preservation centre to serve the Mid-Atlantic states.) Evidence of increased awareness shows up at the doorstep of places like the Northeast Document Conservation Center, nestled on the provincial campus of the Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass. In the past eight years, the staff of this center has almost quadrupled, from 12 to 42. This increase is due in large measure to what the center's executive director. Dr Ann Russell, sees as "a growing appetite and funding" for preservation services.

This thriving, nonprofit enterprise pays its way by charging sizable fees for the painstaking work of restoration; and so it necessarily deals with documents that have a constituency. If a research library or historical society considers a document valuable enough to invest considerable money in, then it will survive.

And that, generally, is the process around the country. where institutions look at their own collections and make the tough decisions about what to

At the moment, a "triage method" prevails, observes Ms Walker of Yale. The Christian Science Monitor.

FAMILY DOCTOR By DR ALLAN BRUCKHEIM

QUESTION: I may be in trouble. My doctor is advising surgery for a ruptured disk, but I am not sure I understand what this is.

Will you help me? ANSWER: I'll surely try to. Our spine or backbone is made up of alternating layers of bone and cartilage, like a stack of poker chips. The function of the backbone in man is to hold us erect and protect the vital nerves of the spinal cord. The bones, or vertebrae, provide strength to the spine, while the layers of cartilage, or disks, provide cushions for the bones and the flexibility that permits us to bend and twist. The cartilage disks have two main parts, an outer tough capsule and an inner, softer nucleus or centre. Sometimes, due to injury or strain, the outer capsule breaks, or ruptures, and the pulpy nucleus pushes through and presses against the nerves that run alongside. When this occurs the nerve becomes irritated, causing a tingling sensation, or numbness or pain, or even weakness in the muscles they are attached to If this has happened to you, and I think it has, the pressure on the nerves must be removed, by operating on your ruptured disk. The procedure usually requires the services of a neurosurgeon to operate around the nerves, and an orthopaedic surgeon to remove the affected disk and then attain the two vertebrae in a solid fashion. I am sure that now that you have this explanation to work with your physician will be happy to fill in the details.

QUESTION: Is a "corn" and a "bunion" the same thing? What causes them to

ferent, although they both usually occur on the feet, and they both stem from the same cause. A corn is an area of thickened and hardened skin, usually occurring over the knuckle of a toe. A bunion, however, is an enlargement of a joint of the big toe and can be due to excess fluid in the joint or to changes in the bones that make up the joint. They both are formed as a response to pressure on that area of the foot, pressure which generally is created by poor-fitting Women's shoe styles seem to create the problem more frequently for them than in men, but some people inherit a tendency to form these annoying bumps. If you won't or can't change your fashions, you may have to consult a foot specialist for the help, which in some cases requires surgery.

Sridevi: no more numero uno

Bobby girl's giant leap to stardom

ACTORS competed for the No. 1 spot on the basis of the popularity and the number of films they had. Then Amitabh Bachchan captured the number one slot and retained the title for several years. Now, the actresses have joined the foray for the top spot. The racing bug has bitten the females, too.

Sridevi, considered the number one spot holder, consolidated her position in 1987 with such big hits as Nagina, Mr India and Karma. Film trade circles predicted would-be contenders for the top spot. Meenakshi Seshadhiri was named their natural choice. Surprising everyone Dimple (Khanna) Kapadia raced ahead. This encouraged other heroines to try for the first, second and other spots.

Rating

The top position is normally decided by the number of films an actress has and the fees she can command. This directly relates to the number of films in the pipeline and the ratio of films sold to distributors in different zones. Ultimately, the box office returns, influence the choice. This determines the heroine's rating, her acting talent and fan following. This is one reason why an actress can lose her number one position. Dimple now seems to be lead-ing and may hit the jackpot in Dimple's past -- personal and career-wise - are not hindering her leap to the winning post. This year, the 30-year old beauty divorced and a mother of two teenaged girls, has broken all traditional rules and tabeos about a leading lady and her image. Earlier, marriage and motherhood were considered fatal for the career of an actress and in the past, actresses not reveal the existence of heir children. For instance, Nutan and Mala Sinha.

President

Dimple also set strange precedents: she became a star with Bobby at the age of 14, married Rajesh Khanna at 15, started afresh at 27. Ten years with the egotist Khanna were miserable, as she was wilful and quarrelsome. He was pursuing his career and did not allow her to work. So she left him, taking her two daughters Twinkle and Chinky. Then there were reports of her affairs with Rishi Kapoor, Vyjayendra, Imran Khan and others and then a long-term relationship with Sunny.

Her comeback with Sagar was not smooth. Ramesh Sippy signed her with the Bobby star Rishi but then delayed the film while having an affair with her. Meanwhile, two other movies. which she had slyly signed, bombed. Zakhmi Sher and Manzil Manzil were big turnips. Even Sagar was just an average film. Dimple stooped to doing dances in films like Patal Bhairvi, in which Jaya Prada was the heroine. Her later films like Lava, Aithaar, Arjun, or Allarakha did not help her. She even did a Tamil film Vikram for Kamalhasan. Miracle Within just 15 months everything has changed for Dimple. Now she is the most sought after heroine and has signed more than forty films, with several offers coming every week. The miracle happened after two films: Jaanbaz and Insaniyat Ke Dushman. With Insaaf, she hit the jackpot... Feroz Khan's westernised film Jaanbaz showed her potential as a sex symbol, wearing fashionable clothes and agreeing to do passionate love scenes with Anil Kapoor, like the much talked about one in the haystack.

Raj Kumar Kohli's film, though a multi-starrer, showed Dimple's talent for dramatics and emoting, along with her glamour. And though Mukul Khanna's big comeback vehicle, Dimple in a double role had equal scope, both as a modern girl oozing sex and as a traditional Indian woman. And most recently she has rejoined hands with Rajesh Khanna to do his film Jai Shiv Shankar.

Where Dimple scores over Sridevi is in her flexibility. Though Hema Malini is playing the lead in Marg, Dimple does not mind playing a prostitute. In Lekin and Bees Saal Baad, she plays the role of a woman who died prematurely. In Pati Parmeshwar she plays a vamp and in Aalishan she has Amitabh as the hero. Sridevi does not have such variety. She of course has her long list of films, especially South-based, and a couple of big-banners like Yash Chopra's Chandni. But her limitations in speaking dialogues or doing only certain kinds of roles and her snobbish attitude about price and other demands will pull her down when compared with Dimple. who might race ahead to the

Controversial serial on partition horrors

FORTY years after independence, Govind Nihalani's TV serial Tamas tries to portray, in all its horror, the holocaust of partition, and shows humanity's callousness.

Based on Bhisham Sahni's novel of the same name, the five-part controversial serial. depicts things as they really happened without softening or glamourising issues. Set in a small town in Punjab, on the eve of partition, Tamas looks closely at the shameful incidents with the avowed intent of spreading secularism, without pandering to communal sentiments.

"Tamas is dedicated to those who forget history and are condemned to repeat it," Nihalani told an Indian magazine recently. The serial has been hailed by the media as a timely reminder "of the shameful events in our history without cringing from the truth, without trying to pretend they never happened, without deluding ourselves that time and distance have perhaps distorted reality in our minds," writes a columnist in a weekly magazine.

Critics of the film worry about the adverse effects it might have: that it might fan communal tension.

Nihalani says: "Narrow reactionary groups are bound to react. But we can't sit quiet fearing a reaction."

Nihalani has been obsessed with the theme of Tamas eversince he became a director. Work on the TV serial began in late 1981. A major part of the series is based on Bhisham Singh Sahni's novel, but two other stories have been incorporated in the serial. One is about Sardarni, a Sikh woman who protects her Muslim neighbour, and the other tells the tale of Zahoor Baksh, a Muslim scholar working on Hindi literature. Nihalani says that he was obsessed with "anger, bewilderment, belplessness and while making the Om Puri and Deepa Sahi

Om Puri and Deepa Sahi: victims of hatred

Feroz Khan put aside his ambitious Yalgar due to casting problems. He was veering between Sridevi and Dimple. Instead, he prefers a quick production Dayawaan with Vinod Khanna, based on the story of alleged smuggler Vardharajan, already done by Kamalhasan in a Tamil hit "Nayakan." But will Feroz get Vinod's dates more quickly than those of the heroines? Perhaps. Vinod may delay it even more.

Sonam went to see "Sex & Animals in Wild Splendour" at a suburban cinema and started yelling and hissing at particular scenes. The classy audience in the Dress Circle were very embarassed and asked her to clear out. Sure proof, that she has developed body but an immature mind.

Talking of Sonam, her aunt Sabiah who always escorts her, made her stand next to Mandakini at a party, so that photographers could click them. The idea was to show Sonam is three inches taller and Manda shorter.

Tanvi Kiran was once under the thumb of her mother Usha Kiran, a heroine of yesteryears. Now she resents the domination of Shabana Azmi since her marriage to Baba Azmi. This creates lots of problems for Tanvi and brings her in conflict with her own husband. The trouble is Tanvi has been praised for her role in Tera Nasm Mera Nasm and now she wants to have her own way in career matters. But no one is buying the film.

Previous stars are desperate to earn money. Dev Anand has modelled for a textile company. something he would never do before. But he is bent on making a lavish show of Sachche Ka Bolbala and has sold his property to finance it. God help him if the film flops. Dev's onetime heroine Hema Malini is modelling for electric fans, possibly because she has no real fans left. And she is also producing her own films.

What does Sridevi do when she is not acting? She hates reading, attending parties or meeting people. The only thing she enjoys is spicy Madrasi food. Her best friend is sister Sri Lata. The word is out that Sri devi is a dumb doll. What does the future hold for her: a smooth South Indian husband and bags of money.

These days, Moushumi Chatterjee is airing a new grouse. Annoyed that she'd been flooded with "elderly" roles ever since she played mama to Chunkey Pandey in Aug Hi Aug, the erstwhile balika (who claims to be younger than Dimple) is all out to shatter the unwanted image. How? By going 'mod.' Whether she will get those teen bopper roles remains to be seen.

Vinod Khanna's charm just doesn't work on Sridevi and Jaya Prada. Unlike the Amritas and Dimoles of Bombay, these two South Indian imports don't quite go weak in the knees at the sight of the handsome, former sanyasi, Recently when the producer of a Mukul Anand film tried to get Sri for his project, Sridevi flatly refused to even consider a film starring "such an indisciplined actor."

Jaya, on the other hand, is said to have put her pretty foot down when the producers of Ustad once again wasted her precious dates. The lady would wait no more for the whimsical Vinod and vanished to Madras.

The fad that was started by Yul Brynner and continued by Telly Savalas was picked up by the Indian actors Amrish Puri and Anupam Kher. But it is none of these guys who aspire for immorality through their shining pates. A little-known actor called Maumoujee has collected a sheaf of recommendation letters, hoping for a place in the Guinness Book of Records. He claims to be the first actor who has performed in more than 200 films with a totally baid pate! Some ambitions are sure bizarre.

Who is the tailest of them all? Mandakani or Sonam?

LONDON, Jan 29, (Opecna): Oil and natural gas liquids production in the British sector of the North Sea in 1987 dropped to 2.47 million bod from its previous year's level of 2.54 million bpd, according to a report prepared by the London

Japan's trade bulges to record $96b

BUSINESS & FINANCE

Japan's trade surplus, reported today, bulged to a record $96 billion in 1987 but economists believe the worst is now over.

"At first this figure appears disappointing because there is no improvement (over 1986's 592.83 billion), said Fuji Bank economist Masaru Takagi. "But it is only temporary as the basic trend is towards an improvement in the balance."

The trade imbalance had been shrinking over the past months but sharp gains early in 1987 boosted the year's trade surplus to a record, said Kazutoshi Habamura, economist for Nikko Research Centre.

Exports Economists said that although the volume of exports have been in a downtrend, the falling value of the US dollar against the yen has distorted the trade figures. When the dollar drops the value of yen-based exports rise

"We would like to look into the possibility of making more appropriate cooperative and constructive relationships with Asian and Pacific nations, including eventually some sort of free trade pact," Hisashi Hosokawa, director of International Economic Affairs at the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, said in an interview.

The notion of a US-Japan free trade pact gained momentum after a similar arrangement was concluded last October between the United States and Canada.

Under the US-Canada pact, the two nations agreed to open their markets fully to each others' products by such steps as eliminating bilateral tariffs within 10 years.

Japan might gain from setting a broad regional free trade zone, but persuading less developed Asian countries to join would be difficult, economists said.

Move to challenge Japan

Europeans develop HDTV system

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Jan 29, (AP): Four European electronics giants are jointly developing an advanced TV system to challenge Japan's lead in a technology that experts say will revolutionise the industry.

The Robert Bosch GmbH of West Germany, Philips Inter-national BV of the Netherlands, Thomson of France and Thorn EMI of Britain have worked on the system, called High-Definition Television, since 1986.

The first prototype equipment, such as cameras and videotape recorders, is expected to be ready by the autumn.

"In 1 1/2 years, Europe has put together a system including hardware," said Michel Carpenter, head of the telecommunications section of the European Commission, the executive body of the European Economic Community. Japan needed much more time, Carpenter added. Promises

More important, they say, HDTV technology will have a spin-off effect into other areas of electronics and telecommunications, a market that will be worth $26 billion a year in Europe by the mid-1990s.

If Japan gets its HDTV system accepted as a world standard, it will dominate the TV equipment market --- from cameras to video cassette recorders - and control HDTV technology patents. That would force Europe to pay for Japanese license fees, European industry officials say.

The main issue concerning European industry is to ensure it does not lose out by a standard that would give the advantage to the Japanese," said George Waters, head of the European Broadcasting Union's technical centre bere.

US import prices up

The price of goods imported into the United States shot up 14.8 per cent in 1987, reflecting a dramatic way the impact the weaker dollar has had on the price Americans must pay for foreign products, the government said yesterday. The Labour Department said the increase was the first since the government began keeping import price statistics in 1983.

Import prices had fallen 2.5 per cent in 1983 and 1.6 per cent in both 1984 and 1985 and then declined a giant 8.6 per cent in 1986, reflecting the big drop in oil prices that year.

Impact Excluding energy products, the cost of imported goods rose 8.4 per cent in 1986 and 9.6 per cent in 1987, reflecting the impact the dollar has been having on the cost of imported goods for the past two years.

The report said that the bulk of the increase in import prices last year could be attributed to the decline in the value of the dollar, which fell in value by 12.6 per cent in 1987, according to a trade-weighted index used by the Labour Department. US consumer prices rose 4.4

per cent in 1987, a four-fold increase from the 1.1 per cent gain in 1986. This turn-around was blamed in large part on the rising cost of imported oil and other foreign products.

Japan to slash its oil bill in February

TOKYO, Jan 29, (Reuter): Japan will save itself more than $3 million per day on its oil purchases next month because it has refused to pay Opec's high official petroleum prices, oil industry sources said yesterday. "Japan will be paying at least a dollar a barrel less on average for its oil in February if the spot market (where oil is freely traded among dealers) stays where it is," said an oil analyst in Tokyo. In addition, the dollar has fallen against the yen from an average of about 135 yen in the fourth quarter to just over 127 yea today, making the yea price of oil about six per Japan is now paying spot market prices for most of the more than three million barrels it imports daily. In the October-December 1987 period, it paid the higher official prices charged by the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (Opec).

Japan imports more than 95 per cent of its oil and is second only to the United States as the world's biggest oil buyer. During the last three months of 1987, it paid Opec-set prices for around 75 per cent of the oil it bought directly from producing countries, the sources said. But Japanese companies will pay official prices for only around 40 per cent of the oil it will import in February, the sources said. Japan will buy most of the additional oil it needs on the spot market, where oil is currently selling up to $2 a barrel below Opec-set prices, and from Middle East producers at prices linked to spot market values, they said.

The base Opec prices is $18 a barrel. Japan's average buying price under long-term contracts was around $17 in the fourth quarter of 1987 but if spot prices remain steady it will pay about $16 on average in February, oil industry sources said. But they said the strategy could backfire becau Japan's stepped-up purchases from the spot market could boost that market's prices and thus Japan's oil bill.

Opec oil output below ceiling, says Lukman

KADUNA, Nigeria, Jan 29, (Reuter): Opec President Rilwann Lukman said yesterday the organisation's oil output was now below its self-imposed ceiling of 15.06 million barrels per day (bpd).

"Opec is now producing a little less than its set quota," Lukman said at a briefing for reporters in this northern Nigerian city, where he was inspecting a petrochemicals plant. But he said exact January figures were being compiled at the Opec (Organ-isation of Petroleum Exporting Countries) secretariat in Vienna and would be ready in a few days. "It (Opec production) is about two to three million bpd lower than what we were producing at the end of last year," Lukman, who is also Nigeria's Oil Minister, said. The group's output in December was estimated at less than 18 million bpd, sharply lower from a peak of around 20 million bpd in August. But crude oil prices have stayed weak because the market believes there is still an oversupply. Lukman said nearly all Opec's 13 members were experiencing customer resistance to official selling prices of around $18 per barrel but he believed oil prices would rise soon. The Middle East Economic Survey newsletter reported this week that Nigeria planned to sell three million barrels of crude to US companies on a netback basis so as to keep output near its Opec quota of 1.3 million bpd. "There is no truth whatsoever in this ... people expect us to give netbacks but they are wasting their time because we will not," said Lukman. Netback deals involving basing the price of crude on the market value of the refined products it will yield. Lukman said Nigeria was close to agreements on buying stakes in foreign refineries but declined to name the firms involved. New York industry sources say it is negotiating to obtain a stake in Hill Petroleum Co. a unit of Salomon Inc. "We don't want to mention names until negotiadefinitely not ture," Lukman said. "We are negotiating for refineries and various outlets and we have in fact decided that it will be good for Nigeria to go downstream in the petrolet

US expects expansion to continue through '88

WASHINGTON, Jan 29, (Reuter): The Reagan administration is continuing on brisk business investment spending and export growth to carry the United States' five-year expans the longest on record, through the rest of 1988. After the government reported that the economy grew at a healthy pace of 3.8 per cent between the fourth quarters of 1986 and 1987, Commerce Department Undersecretary Robert Ortner yesterday said the expansion would continue through 1988, but at a slower pace. The nation's total output of goods and services, or gross national product (GNP), finished the last three months of 1987 with a strong 4.2 per cent annual growth rate. But because the expansion was largely fuelled by production of goods that manufacturers were unable to sell as spending by consumers took its sharpest dive in more than seven years, administration and private economists do not expect future economic growth to be as basely accommodated to the consumers of the consumer brisk. "Overall growth probably will slow, followed by a pickup in the second half. Ortner told reporters, adding that 1988 growth is still expected to meet the administration's 2.4 per cent prediction. On the other hand, a recession is considered unlikely this year, which should improve Republican chances of keeping control of the White House in the November elections, Allen, Sinai, chief economist for Boston Co., a subsidiary of Shearson Lehman Bros Inc in New York said GNP would likely expand at a real rate of 2.0 to 2.5 per cent this year, although the first quarter "could be anywhere from flat or negative to growth of about one ner cent.

He said exports should boost the economy later this year. The value of the country's net exports of goods and services rose by $7.7 billion in the last quarter of 1987 as a cheaper dollar helped make them more attractive. It was the fourth increase in the last five quarters and the trend is expected to continue, Ortner

Opec Fund operations surge

VIENNA, Jan 29, (Opecna): Despite difficulties faced by Opec countries, the operations of the Opec Fund for Internat

Development in 1987 rose approximately 56 per cent compared with 1986, director general Dr Seyyid Abdulai said here.

In an exclusive interview with Opecna, marking the institution's 12th anniversary, Abdulai said the fund has been able to fulfil more than 90 per cent of its commitment in the seventh lending programme covering the period 1986-87. "We will move more in this direction as a consequence of a decision by Opec countries to raise their lending schemes by 10 per cent every two years," he said. Abdulai noted that developing countries appreciated very much the sacrifice made by Opec countries over

"You hear nice things about Opec from recipients when they come here or at the international fora," he said, adding "they praise Opec countries for their continued willingness to assis other developing countries."

Abdulai recalled that late last year at the summit in Addis Abbaba, Ethiopia, to discuss the debt situation of Africa, the Organisation of African Unity heads of state praised Opec specifically by name for the "assistance given and the understanding." They said Opec institutions were about the most understan ding they work with in terms of "concessionary loans, simple ways or flexibility." The Opec Fund is the only multilateral institution which does not require borrowing countries to contribute to its capital as a condition for receiving aid. The fund also does not try to determine priorities for recipients, but reacts to their requests in a speedy manner.

TOKYO, Jan 29, (AP): Fujitsu Ltd. Japan's largest computer manufacturer, will continue to expand production overseas to remain competitive in international markets, Fujitsu president Takuma Yamamoto said yesterday. Because of the soaring value of the yen, it is natural for Japanese companies such as Fujitsu to establish plants overseas, Yamamoto said.

In August 1986, when the exchange rate reached 155 yen to the dollar, the labour and overhead rates per hour at Fujitsu's Dallas plant in the United States actually became lower than those in our plant in Japan," Yamamoto said in a speech to the Foreign Correspondents Club of Japan. Yesterday, the yen was trading at 127 to one dollar. The yen has more than doubled in value against the US dollar in the last three years, making Japanese goods more expensive overseas but boosting Japanese purchasing power abroad. Many Japanese manufacturers have set up produc-tion facilities abroad to take advantage of the strong yen. Fujitsu currently has five factories in the United States and one each in Ireland, Malaysia, Singapore, South Korea and Spain, Yamamoto said, and overseas output accounts for 3 per cent of Fujitsu's total production. He said he hoped that would increase to 10 per cent

"as soon as possible."

"In today's business environment, our global outlook and global strategies are essential to our success," Yamamoto said. One of the greatest challenges of internationalisation is a need to work with and across many diverse cultures." Committed

He said Fujitsu is committed to becoming a cross-cultural company, and cited its policy of

Wall Street Market Report

New York, Jan 29 — The stock market trimmed its opening gain, following a similar pattern Thursday. Again the bond market's early advance, the third in as many days, provided Wall Street with its buoyancy. But lingering concerns about the health of the economy inhibited turther rallying.

The Dow Jones industrial average traded with a six point gain to 1936, after surging more than 15 points in the first 10 minutes of the session. Advances led declines by a seven to five margin on volume of 101 min shares. A few takeover related stocks remained active. Federated Department Stores rose 1-3/4 to 52-3/4. It is being pursued by Campeau.

London Stock Market Repor

LONDON, JAN 29 - SHARES WERE FIRM IN MODEST AFTERNOON TRADING, WITH PRICES RALLYING FROM MID-AFTERNOON IN LINE WITH A

THE FTSE 100 INDEX AT 1542 GMT WAS UP 7.1 TO 1,791 BUT HAD SLIPPED TO 1,787.8 AFTER BANK OF ENGLAND GOVERNOR ROBIN

LEIGH-PEMBERTON SAID MONETARY CONDITIONS MIGHT HAVE TO BE

TIGHTENED AS WELL TO CONTAIN INFLATIONARY PRESSURES. BUT THE MARKET RECOVERED AND GAINED GROUND AFTER WALL STREET MOVED AHEAD

THE FISE 100 IS NOW IN A POSITION TO THREATEN THE 1,800

POINT LEVEL WHICH MANY ANALYSTS AGREE COULD BE A KEY RESISTANCE POINT. IF THAT LEVEL IS DECISIVELY BREACHED THE FTSE COULD HAVE

RANDALL GOLDSHITH OF JAMES CAPEL REASONS THAT WITH THE U.K.

INSTITUTIONS HAVE RECENTLY BEEN SEEN AS WARY OF PUTTING CASH

THE POTENTIAL TO RISE TO THE NEXT RESISTANCE LEVEL OF 1,965.

ECONOMY IN GOOD SHAPE, WITH FAIRLY GOOD GROWTH AND INFLATION

UNDER CONTROL, THERE IS NO REASON CASH RICH INSTITUTIONS SHOULD

TAKEN OUT OF THE MARKET IN THE WAKE OF THE OCTOBER WORLD SHARE

COLLAPSE BACK INTO EQUITIES WHILE THE OUTLOOK APPEARS UNCERTAIN

LEIGH-PEMBERTON SAID U.K. INTEREST RATES MIGHT HAVE TO RISE.

ON A PERCEPTION THERE THAT A RALLYING U.S. BOND MARKET COULD MEAN U.S. INTEREST RATES MIGHT BE ABOUT TO DECLINE.

NOT PUT MORE MONEY BACK INTO THE EQUITY MARKET.

LONDON, JAN 29 - GOLD BULLION EXTENDED EARLIER LOSSES DURING THE AFTERNOON TO END THE DAY AT 456.00/456.50 DLRS AN OUNCE, ITS LOWEST CLOSING LEVEL SINCE OCTOBER 5.

HOWEVER, LIGHT SUPPORT AT THE LOWER LEVELS LIFTED THE METAL TWO DLRS OFF THE DAY'S LOW OF 454.00/454.50 DLRS, WHICH COMPARED WITH OPENING AND PREVIOUS CLOSING LEVELS OF 466.80/467.30 AND 466.25/466.75 DLRS RESPECTIVELY.

DEALERS SAID THEY COULD SEE GOLD GOING A LITTLE LOWER IN THE NEAR FUTURE IN THE ABSENCE OF FRESH LEADS, BECAUSE THE MARKET REMAINED TECHNICALLY WEAK. THE NEXT AREA OF MAJOR SUPPORT WAS AROUND 440 DLRS, THEY SAID.

London Money Market

LONDON, JAN 29 - MONEY RATES EXTENDED OPENING RISES TO END AS HUCH AS 1/8 POINT UP ON LAST NIGHT AFTER BANK OF ENGLAND GOVERNOR ROBIN LEIGH-PEMBERTON AGAIN WARNED THAT INTEREST RATES MIGHT NEED TO BE RAISED TO CONTAIN INFLATIONARY PRESSURES. LEIGH-PEMBERTON WARNED EARLIER THIS MONTH THAT U.K. ECONOMIC GROWTH REMAINED STRONG IN THE WAKE OF THE OCTOBER STOCK MARKET

CRASH, PERHAPS UNSUSTAINABLY SO. IN A TELEVISION INTERVIEW TODAY, HE NOTED THAT STRONG BANK LENDING, HIGH IMPORTS AND BUOYANT DOMESTIC DEMAND CONTAINED "THE ELEMENTS OF A RESURGENCE OF INFLATION". "THE POLICY IMPLICATION IS THAT WE MAY HAVE TO TIGHTEN MONETARY POLICY," HE SAID.

Growth the rightway to correct trade imbalances: Fed official

Surplus nations miss chances for growth

DAVOS, Switzerland, Jan 29, (Reuter): Countries such as Japan and West Germany which run a balance of payments surplus are missing opportunities to promote world economic growth, a US central banker said

Robert Heller, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, told delegates to this year's world economic forum here that growth, not recession, was the right way to correct trade imbalances.

Growth

"It is important to emphasise that the adjustment of trade imbalances should not be brought about by protectionism or a recession in the United States," he said. "That would be a prescription for global stagnation and maybe even global recession.

Adjustment should come from greater growth, led by a surge in imports to countries already running big trade surpluses, he said.

"But time is passing, and with it opportunities for forwardlooking and growth-oriented measures on behalf of the surplus countries are being foregone," he

"As a result, the pressures for adjustment by the deficit countries are mounting and are becoming increasingly difficult to resist and to cope with," he

The United States is expected to run a big trade deficit again this year and the shortfall in its current account - measuring trade in goods, services and financial transfers - is running at $160 billion a year.

Heller said the fall in the dollar - by more than 50 per cent against the West German mark and the Japanese yen in the past three years — would help to res-tore a better balance in trade and

"But it would be wrong to assume that this process will be entirely automatic and painless." he said.

The United States would have to restructure its economy towards foreign trade, something which was already happening and beginning to show up in business activity.

"For many American producers, especially the small and medium-sized manufacturers, this will be a period of unprecedented challenges. Some of them may even have to learn German and Japanese," he said.

Changes

The restructing in America and the complementary changes in Japan and Europe - would be easier to achieve in an environment of growth, rather than stagnation, he said.

"Instead of fighting over market shares, growth will permit everyone to move forward," he said.

The US deficit on trade and the Japanese and West German surpluses have been a cause of considerable strain in economic relations over the past two years, and led to periodic efforts by US officials to talk the dollar down in hopes that a lower dollar would stimulate exports and cut down the appetite of Americans for imported goods.

Cuts But West Germany has so far resisted calls for bigger tax cuts and for speeding up its planned tax reform to keep growth on track. On Thursday, West German Economic Minister Martin Bangemann said the government was looking for economic growth of only 1.5 to two per cent this year, little changed from the 1.7 per cent of 1987.

His estimate is above forecasts by some West German economic research institutes, which see growth of as low as one per cent. Heller said the United States could expect growth of more than two per cent, a slowing from 1987 but not a recession.

"This is not at all unsatisfactory for an expansion that is now over five years old," he said. "Although a recession is not evident in the numbers, the quarterly pattern may well be a bit uneven.

Some firms come with new products to promote in Kuwait such as, a new floodlighting system designed for enclosed area lighting schemes, tissue converting machinery, tools for high pressure pipelines, industrial rubber hoses, insulating foam for internal and external pipes, flanges for oil and petrochemical industries, safe PVC floor coverproof electrical equipment, PTFE to counteract stress in structures, electronic systems to eliminate flying insects, fire fighting equipment and hose fittings.

Some of the firms are hoping to appoint representatives in Kuwait, including one which produces a range of colour pigments for industrial paints.

The mission will also move on to other GCC states. Further details of the mission and its participants are available from the Commercial Department of the British Embassy, a press release said.

LIMA, Jan 29. (AP): A decade after petroleum became this nation's top export item, replacing copper, a dramatic decline in production has forced Peru to import oil. The purchases, though small, have sparked a minor crisis, prompting the center-left government of President Alan Garcia to revise laws to attract more foreign investment in the oil There is speculation that the revisions could foreshadow a broader softening of government policy toward foreign invest-

Realistic *The law is realistic. We have to be able to compete on a world level," Garcia said in late December. The new legislation offers incentives to potential oil explorers and liberalises regulations on petroleum firms.

The measures follow a criticial assessment of the country's oil policy by Jaysuno Abramovich, president of the state oil company Petroperu. He warned in July of an impending need to import.

Abramovich said restrictive government policies were forcing oil companies to reduce operations, while scaring away possible investors.

Garcia dismissed the comments as "alarmist." A month later, Peru began importing light crude after production declines left the country short.

Energy Minister Abel Salinas told Congress in November that more relaxed oil investment laws were imperative. He said Peru could become a net importer within three years if new wells are not quickly found and tapped. "The companies were being prevented from making a profit," said one international oil executive close to the Peruvian industry. "It cost more to operate than they were getting for their oil," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Some other foreign businesses, including banks, have cut operations or left the country since Garcia, a populist reformer, took office 30 months ago and vowed to solve the nation's chronic economic woes with nationalist measures.

But the dollar reserves the growth used to fuel two years of rapid growth have dwindled, and independent economists predict a recession this year with inflation of more than 200 per cent.

An economic journal, the Andean Report, said the new law gives oil companies a "greenish light," and may signal a softening in the government stance toward foreign investment in

Encourages

The legislation encourages risk explorations and permits companies to recover production costs more quickly. In a related move, Garcia recently lifted a two-year ban on profit remittances.

Salinas said the actions put Peru on a more equal footing with Colombia, Argentina and Ecuador. More than 100 foreign oil companies are operating there, compared with three in Peru. He said 12 companies have shown interest recently in invest-

But industry analysts said foreign companies are still concerned that the government could reverse its new oil stance under opposition from powerful left-wing politicians, who have criticised the law as exploitative. Garcia rescinded and redrew all oil contracts shortly after taking office and nationalised a subsidiary of Enron Petroleum Corp. of Houston. Texas. Analysts said the actions had a chilling affect on foreign investment and questioned whether the government could restore lost Although Peru has an

US oil giant loses $4.4b

NEW YORK, (AP): Texaco Inc. lost $4.76 billion in the final three months of 1987 and $4.4 billion for the year because of charges stemming from its legal struggle with Pennzoil Co. and efforts to extricate itself from bankruptcy court, the troubled oil giant said

The record losses compared with a profit of $50 million in the 1986 fourth quarter and 725 nullion for all of 1986. "1987 was a difficult year for Texaco, which faced the drain on company resources presented by the Pennzoil litigation, the chapter 11 (bankruptcy) proceedings and industrywide pressures on downstream margins," James W. Kinner, president and chief operating officer, said in a statement.

The results include a previously disclosed charge of 52.1 billion stemming from a devaluation of assets and a provision for reserves in anticipation of the company's plans to restructure and emerge from bankruptcy-court protection. They also include a fourthquarter charge of $2.8 billion applicable to a settlement reached with Pennzoil in late December, under which the smaller company agreed to scrap its record $10.53-billion judgment against Texaco in exchange for $3 billion in cash.

Pennzoil won the judgement from a Texas jury that had ruled Texaco illegally sabotaged Pennzoil's plans to acquire parts of Getty Oil Co. four years ago. Texaco sought federal bankruptcy protection last April to avoid posting a potentially devastating bond equal to the judgment while

Latin American finance ministers walk tightrope

MEXICO CITY, Jan 29, (Reuter): The job involves high risk, high exposure, and a fair chance of untimely dismissal and public criticism. Requirements include sound economic knowledge, negotiat-ing skills, and the ability to inspire trust in foreign bankers. "One of the most difficult jobs in Latin America is that of finance minister," said a European diplomat. "Since the debt crisis, you have had to deal with interests that cannot really be reconciled. It is high-wire act." High toll The act has taken a high toll. In Brazil, for example, finance ministers have lasted an average of eight months in office in the past few years. In Ecuador there have been five finance ministers since mid-1984. Chile has had five finance ministers since the debt crisis began.

One survived for only for five months. The pitfalls for finance ministers began in August 1982 when Mexico became the first-of adozen Latin American countries to run out of money to repay huge foreign debts. Overail, Latin America now owes around $400 billion. To pay the interest, Latin governments - and more specifically finance ministers had to negotiate new loans or new terms of repayment. These have been granted on condition of cuts in public spending and austerity measures most painfully felt by the poor majority of Latin Americans. "We are being asked to tighten our belts even further," former Mexican Finance Minister Jesus Silva Herzog once said as he emerged from yet another session with international bankers. "But the problem is that many Mexicans don't even have a

Although creditors are beginning to understand the problems of debtors, the basic dilemma remains: how to satisfy demands for austerity and at the same time prevent economic discontent at home from exploding.

Brazil, owing $115 billion, is the Third World's biggest debtor and provides illuminating examples of the dangers to finance ministers as they negotiate minefields sown by conflicting interests. How to convince poor voters to re-elect a president or party whose policies cause hardship and declining standards of liv-ing? How to shift the burden to the rich who are determined to defend their vested interests? The latest Latin finance minister to fall, Brazil's Luiz Carlos Bresser Pereira, pressed for sharp cuts in government spendfor the rich.

Bresser Pereira, economic experts say, was undermined not only by cabinet colleagues but also President Jose Sarney. They said Sarney opposed the demand for a tax hike for the wealthy because Brazil's propertied classes are his principal power base. The president also refused to take on the most powerful interest group - the While Bresser Pereira pushed for wage restraint, the armed for-

Easier A large part of the $40 billion is owed to governments and their agencies rather than to commercial banks, which hold about 5.5 billion. So Egypt is not usually listed among the troubled debtor countries, which generally owe most of their debt to commercial

Governments are easier creditors than private banks, lending for longer periods and at lower rates of interest. But they usually want a nod from the IMF before they make additional concessions, and Egypt and the fund currently are not on the best of terms.

Egypt has failed to meet conditions it agreed on with the fund last May in exchange for a promised loan of $350 million. The conditions included promises to reduce the Egyptian budget deficit and to take other hard financial measures. Egypt was to have drawn some of the remainder of the loan from the fund in November but was not permitted to do so. Now it is likely that several more months will pass before fund officials can complete their review and make a new agreement with Mubarak's government, said the source, who spoke on condition of anon-

Though the amount is small compared with the country's total debt, the loan is important because the fund is owed by 152 governments, many of which are among Egypt's major creditors.
The United States is the biggest contributor to the fund, and Egypt's main creditor. Unless Egypt is on good terms with the fund, the official creditors joined in the "Paris Club" are unlikely to delay billions of dollars in additional interest and repayments that Egypt will be owing by the end of Arrangements After Egypt made its arrangement with the fund last November, the Paris Club governments agreed on delays for 8.2 billion in repayments and interest but details are still being worked out. Final arrangements hoom are due by the end of February.

Sheikh Ali in UK energy talks LONDON, Jan 29, (Reuter):

Kuwait's Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Al Khalifa held private talks yesterday with British Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson, government and diplomatic sources said. Kuwaiti sources said their talks focussed on the Kuwait Investment Office (KIO's) growing stake in British Petroleum Co PLC (BP).

Britain this month said Ruwait had assured it that the KIO's holding in BP was purely a long-term investment, and that the KIO, which is the Londonbased investment arm of the Kuwaiti government, did not intend to interfere in the running: of BP. The KIO has consistently declined to comment on the total stake in BP it is seeking. At last per cent, industry sources said, and oil analysts say it may risk it to the strategic 29.9 per cent level, above which a full bid would be cell count its holding was around 19 above which a run one working to required under British Stock as de Exchange rules.

A BRITISH, consortium's bid to build a third Bosphorous bridge is raising satirical comment in the Turkish press because of perceived similar political styles of their Prime Minister Turgut Ozal and Britain's Margaret Thatcher. Soz newspaper played it up in istanbil on Thursday with a photo-montage, based on "Gone with the Wind" showing Ozal and Thatcher under a headline: "Will Ozal get Maggle on the bridge or will she get him?" Mrs Thatcher is due to visit Turkey in April. (Reuter wirephoto)

Leonard ready for rematch

NEW YORK, Jan 29, (Reuter): Sugar Ray Leonard is ready for a rematch of one of the richest fights in boxing history if Marvellous Marvin Hagler is willing, the New York Post reported yesterday.

Broad hits Aussies for 116

SYDNEY, Jan 29, (Reuter): Opener Chris Broad rediscovered a taste for Australian bowling when his fifth Test century powered England to a strong position on the first day of the bicentennial Test today.

At stumps England were 221 for two as the much-hailed renaissance in Australian Test cricket, following their win in last year's one-day World Cup, came close to being still-born.

Broad, 116 not out at the close, shared in partnershis of 93 with fellow-opener Martyn Moxon and 99 with Nottinghamshire teammate Tim Robinson.

Average The left-handed Broad was voted International Cricketer of the Year following the 1986/87 Ashes tour of Australia when he hit 487 runs in five Tests at an average of 69.57. Three of his previous four Test centuries have been against Australia.

England captain Mike Gatting, who took 37 minutes to get off the mark, was unbeaten of three at the close of a disappointing day's cricket in front of such stars of the past as Sir Donald Bradman, Ted Dexter and Greg Chappell.

Scoring was never brisk on a sun-drenched day when the English batsmen were content to wait for the right ball from an Australian bowling line-up which soon ran out of ideas.

The England manager had to rebuke Gatting on his last visit here when the captain overslept and missed the toss before a game against Victoria.

Gatting on Wednesday sounded off about the Pakistanis again to Journalists: "They've And by us I mean other teams aswell as England. Maybe this (complaining) will stop them."

Gatting had a verbal run-in with Pakistani umpire Shakoor Rana during the second Test in Faisalabad, which almost led to the cancellation of the tour.

Moxon was dropped thrice early in the first session, first by David Boon from a sharp chance at short leg, and then by captain Allan Border when the York-

The ball flew straight to Border at first slip, but it would not stick in the safest pair of hands in Australia and second slip Mike Veletta failed to grasp the Broad was also lucky to reach lunch after driving a full toss straight back through the hands of McDermott in the last over before the interval.

Moxon, 27 not out at lunch, was in trouble from the first ball afterwards when Sleep entered the attack.

Moxon, known to be susceptible to leg-spin, rarely used his feet to counter Sleep's flight and speed variations. It was no surprise when the Englishman, on 40, wafted over a full-length ball and

Robinson's entry brought an acceleration in the run rate and England made the most of some sloppy fielding and tame bowling on a good wicket to reach 156 for Australia gained their second, sweat-soaked success when Robinson fended once too often at a ball from Tony Dodemaide and was caught by Mike Veletta at second slip for 43 with the score on 192 for one.

Eight runs later Broad brought up England's 200 and his own century with a four through square leg followed by a two through the covers off the next ball from Dodemaide.

His century took 253 deliveries and contained 11 fours. The oneoff match betwen cricket's oldest rivals celebrates 200 years of white settlement in Australia.

Everton crush Wednesday

LONDON, Jan 29, (Reuter): Scotland's Graeme Sharp hit a first half hat-trick as Everton buried Sheffield Wednesday under an avalanche of goals in their English FA Cup third round, third soccer replay on Wednesday.

After five and a half hours of stalemate, Everton found the form which earned them the First Division title last season and romped to a 5-0 win. Trace

All of the goals came in the first half, Sharp opening the flood-gates with his first after just five minutes. Adrian Heath fired the second in the 19th minute and a three-tomorrow. Sharp was assisted in completing the third hat-trick of his career by some appalling defensive play as Wednesday failed to come to terms with the absence of the injured Lawrie Madden.

Manager Howard Wilkinson was forced to abandon his blocking plan of three centre-backs and that let in Sharp, the man he feared most. Wednesday's only consolation was their £250,000 ($445,000) share of gate receipts from the protracted tie which was watched by more than 142,000 fans. Meanwhile, Brian Clough, whose distinguished managerial career has a notable blemish in his failure to make an impact on the English FA Cup, finds a former employee plotting to ensure this lack of success continues tomorrow. Frank Clark, whose soccer career was twice rescued by Clough when he offered him jobs at Nottingham Forest as a player and then as a coach, now man-Leyton Orient, the Fourthdivision London side who face Forest in a fourth-round cup

Clark said: "It's ironic that after all that, I'm now trying to stop him winning the only major honour he has not won." In nearly 20 years as manager of Derby and Forest, Clough has won two European cups, two League titles and two League Cups. But he has never managed to steer Forest past the quarterfinals of the FA Cup.

Four of tomorrow's fourthround ties bring together First Division clubs, including holders Coventry against Watford. The others are Luton against Southampton, Manchester United against Chelsea and Queen's Park Rangers against West Ham. Confidence

For the match against Chelsea, Manchester United manager Alex Ferguson has given a vote of confidence to the team that won 2-1 at Arsenal last Sunday.

This means Graeme Hogg retains his place in the central defence. "Graeme did very well at Arsenal and against Oxford when he came on as a substitute," Ferguson said. "I have said all along I didn't want him to go and he's no longer available for trans-

Chun pledges safe stay in Seoul for visitors

SEOUL, Jan 29, (Reuter): President Chun Doo Hwan said today South Korea was fully prepared to counter any North Korean attempts to sabotage this year's Seoul Olympic Games, and assured participants of a rewarding, safe stay.

Hamper

Chun said his country's security was threatened by a continuing military build-up in the North and northern-sponsored terrorism such as last November's destruction of a South Korean airliner with 115 people aboard.

"We expect North Korea to try to employ all possible methods, including acts of terrorism, to hamper the Olympics," Chun told a news conference at the presidential blue house, his first for foreign journalists.

But he said: "The important thing is not to be surprised. We are reading the intentions of North Korea clearly and accurately. Our military, police and entire people are united in preparing measures to cope with any sabotage schemes from the North.

Becker beats Lend again

KOBE, Japan, Jan 29, (Reuter): Former Wimbledon champion Boris Becker, back from a troublesome knee injury, beat Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 7-66-4 in an exhibition match yesterday.

It was Becker's second consecutive victory over the world number one in as many days. Becker best Lendl 6-3 1-6 6-2 in Osaka on Wednesday when the West German made his first appearance since he was beaten by Lendi at the Masters tournament in New York last month. Mistake

In a women's exhibition, Australian Open champion and world number one Stelli Graf of West Germany beat Gabriela Sabatini 6-26-1. She defeated the Argentinian 6-0 6-1 in Osaka on Wednesday.

Becker says his big mistake last season was in not taking a chronic knee injury seriously.

Becker, whose 1987 season was plagued by injury, illness and inconsistency, told the West German Tennis-Magazine that he changed his attitude when he returned from last December's Grand Prix Masters tournament in New York and consulted Bayern Munich soccer club doctor Hans-Wilhelm Mueller-Wohlfarth.

Lewis' claims anger British track officials

LONDON, Jan 29, (Reuter): British athletics officials yesterday called upon quadruple Olympic gold medallist Carl Lewis to prove his allegations that athletes in Britain and the United States had died after taking performance-enhancing Tony Ward, spokesman for the British Amateur Athletics Board, said the American's comments were "unqualified," and had brought the sport into disrepute. He said the board knew of no drugs-linked deaths among British athletes.

He asked: "How the hell does he know? Who is feeding out this sort of information? Where is the evidence?

In a television interview on Wednesday, Lewis said: "We are not just talking about steroids . . people have died here in Britain and in the United States and that is being overlooked.

Testing

"We have to realise that we have to get an independent agency to handle drug testing because it is not being dealt with fairly. People in competitions are on drugs and not getting caught and there is a big problem there.

Ward countered: "We have no knowledge of any athlete dying in Britain. The remark should have been pursued in the programme. Instead, it was allowed to float away. That was irresponsible."

He added that Lewis' claims would be examined by a committee of inquiry set up to consider other allegations.

Ward said the board's drugs abuse committee would be "forward-looking," and would chart the way ahead in the war on performance-enhancing substances.
